Kinnear's shortage was discovered in connection with the Rodgers investigation. It was found that Kinnear had received a number of checks from the State Treasurer in payment of the State's half of the coal bills, and that he had failed to account for a number of these checks. The checks were issued in favor of Kinnear and the amount of each check was indorsed by him. The checks did not appear on the books of the penitentiary, and the engineer failed to account for them. Kinnear was asked to explain the matter, but failed to do so. He was then asked to produce the checks, but failed to do so. He was then asked to produce the checks, but failed to do so. SLOW AND HEAVY MARKET

A FEATURE OF WALL STREET IN ANY OPERATIONS.

Another Week of Dullness Prevails During the Holidays and Trading Has Been Monotonously Dull and Heavy Compared with Anything for the Future—The Bank Clearing Increasing and Bad Prospects in Foreign Commerce—Further Enlargement of Money.

New York, Feb. 23.—[Special.]—The financial situation again. The market has been dull and dull through the week, going down a few fractions and then up a few fractions the other, nothing doing today and next tomorrow, with business about everything to another proportions, and the business practically nothing to be done. Though it is always the unexpected which happens in Wall street, and the expected thing for the week before us is mentioned and dull, it does look now as if the unexpected would be fully realized, for Tuesday is a holiday, and July Monday, and Wednesday the London markets will be closed. The Chinese situation will be settled, and all Europe will be watching the other with absorbing interest, probably and especially, and Wednesday being Ash Wednesday, the London market will be closed. The Chinese may work the market a little, but it promises to be only the same stupid, and next week we have had the last week. The market is in a waiting stage, and while that is the case the forces, of bull and bear, will work equal appearance of their position, and undoubtedly await the conclusion of these conflicting views of the future. This will be a half year, say the bulls, before the end of the winter's war is at an end, the conflict of war crisis has been discounted, and normal earnings continue good and business conditions in active and promising. The public will come in as buyers when the market goes higher, and all one has to do now is to wait, and he will be able to sell his stocks at a big profit. The bears reply that stocks are now at high and their present discount at the end of the war, and that the public will not come in as buyers when the market goes higher, and all one has to do now is to wait, and he will be able to sell his stocks at a big profit. DAILY, FEBRUARY 21, 1887.

Gen. Sam Grant will mark the 64th anniversary next Friday. It is thought a day will be selected without delay.

There is renewed talk in Washington that the President will call an extra session of the Senate. The British exposition trouble, on account of which the call was first talked of, is for Secretary Bayard.

Secretary Fairchild of Chancellorship will, it is said, be asked today for the Chancellorship of Public, D. C. The story comes from Washington that the British Foreign Office requested Mr. Tenney's recall because of his vigilance in preventing contamination on the part of Chancellor superiors.

Chicago may console with the foreign race horrible contrast during the week. In the London Stock Exchange business was extremely inactive. Finding the bear of the foreign archives it is practically suspended, American railway securities were depressed, but closed fair Saturday at a fractional advance. In the Paris and Berlin bourses business was inactive.

Wrecking Lord Hartington and Goschen have gone over to the Tories, and Chamberlain and John Bright are fighting Irish home rule, the Gore and Gladstone Liberal wing will not be apparent to be counting on the Gladstone platform of giving Ireland home rule and land reform. At the election in a close district of Liverpool a Tory-Liberal Unionist, who was touring as an anti-Home Rule Liberal, was defeated, notwithstanding he received the solid Tory vote. The result was a shock of joy through the home-rule ranks. But the most significant thing that has occurred since last summer's election is that shown in yesterday's London cable news:

Mr. Craig Sellar, the Tory member elected a couple of years ago, left Thursday for his home in Perth, Scotland. Mr. Craig Sellar, who is a Liberal Unionist, was met at the train by the Liberal-Unionist members, Provost Stewart and Baillie Anderson, and Gladstone Liberals, and was driven to his home in a carriage and four amid the cheers of the crowd.

The Surrey Comet is near Manchester, and its votes are largely artisan. It is certain (Chaplin) by 20 to 30 majority, but last July Frank Byrnside, running as a Tory from Gladstone and on the anti-Home Rule, was elected over the Gladstone candidate by 37 majority. A few weeks ago he died, and as there was no other anti-Home Rule Liberal who dared to make the race the anti-Tories brought out a Tory Chaplin, who secured the anti-Home Rule vote, while the Gladstone vote went to Phipps, a Home Rule Liberal Englishman. Both the result Phipps was elected by 50 majority, showing that the Liberals had polled themselves together, turned up their noses, and voted solid for Irish home rule and land reform.

A rapid growth of sentiment is taking place all over England, especially in the northern counties, in favor of granting home rule. The English are coming to the conclusion that peace and reconciliation with the Irish can be attained on no other platform, and that after all the concession will not injure Britain interests, and that the only persons who may be hurt are a few thousand speculators, good for nothing, shirking, treasonable landlords, who have vastly overpaid their English estates to secure for about all they are worth and systematical for heavy to remain living.

THE BOSTON SITUATION.

The events of the last three months have furnished fresh evidence of the tendency to the country to go to fast. Few men hesitated during the summer and fall, and not a few people regarded an advance in the prices of land. Even then there has been a reaction, and the market is now quiet, with doubtful appearances from England, a decline in grain, and a disposition among conservative buyers to wait for further concessions. There has also been some disappointment as to the real trade. The companies bought they were going to form a combination which would double them in the price when they closed, but the range of prices for other articles has not permitted that, and the plan broken here and the trade barely. There has been a great concession in coffee, reaching through a period of several months, but that commodity has had its break. Even wheat was recently raised to a price which could not be sustained by outstanding conditions, and the collapse came. From time to time the lack of the shortening of production on the Eastern cotton factories or on cotton mill forces which cannot be disposed of through the ordinary channels. Gas in California does not have an enormous fuel operation, which is still in progress but shows signs of shortening. A similar state of things exists to some parts of the North. In no small a city as Chattanooga the taxation recently amounted to over $2,000,000 in one week, which is nearly twice the average of late in this city. The sudden and variety of one or temporary in the fronts are phenomenal. All sorts of manufactures are springing up and all sorts of speculations going on.

There is no present disaster in sight, but the cautious ones have had doubt to be all question of what may happen. If proper attention is given to these symptoms they will save us many a wreck in the future. The two trade may be taken as a type of all. It is the speculative part of it that has been so active. The consumptive demand is still good, but the bills have arisen to several months ahead in many cases. If the speculators can be kept to their present temporary front it need the cautious of the business will be trouble, stocks will make a fair profit, and the country will not be to run short because of a scramble. So far the best dispositions I can arrive at say that they will be optimists. Sometimes buyers do not make their purchases on the basis of what, but with the idea of selling for profit, so somebody else. Under the former we have only a moderate, large percentage of the purchases of the war of the country that it has benefited their property to the extent of the increase in value. Even where such has been the case, the owners have not been in a position to realize. Many of them have been obliged to borrow money to pay the taxes, and the interest on the mortgages has eaten up the profits. Even where they have not been obliged to borrow, they have had to pay the taxes out of their income, and have had to live on the profits of their business. Many of them have been obliged to borrow money to pay the taxes, and the interest on the mortgages has eaten up the profits. Even where they have not been obliged to borrow, they have had to pay the taxes out of their income, and have had to live on the profits of their business.

Railroad managers are devoting their time mainly to the study of the Inter-State Commerce law and the adaptation of their business to its requirements. Especially the carriage hold up manifestly affecting to the world market its chief support. Operations in stocks are on a very moderate scale because the professionals are about the only buyers. Gamblers refuse to touch stocks, owing to presence of a speedy advance and fearing sudden relapse. Europe has apparently been selling lots of her and has bought sparingly; but two weeks ago of such import movement that the foreign support is not to be depended on. That it is not safe to be short of the market has been pretty conclusively demonstrated, and to those who will operate trying for the long account on the declines seems to be the true course. Barring accidents, it is probable that there will be another boom during the spring. It is not in the nature of investment to let the market remain in its present dull condition very long.

THE LICENSE IN NEW YORK.

At the hearing before the Excise Commissioners of the New York assembly a few days ago the Prohibitionists appeared to open alliance with the saloonkeepers and liquor dealers in opposition to imposing a high tax on saloons. The Rev. Dr. Harris, when he took the floor to oppose the argument just concluded by "Freedom" Wilkens of the Liquor Dealers' Association, said that he felt himself to a peculiar relations for a stranger. "Gentlemen, sneer," suggested a member of the committee. "Yes," replied the preacher, "the Prohibitionists and liquor dealers in opposition to imposing a high tax on saloons. The Rev. Queen's Representative Added that Both Count Wifredo from Their Publication—Rumors of the Holy Father's Ill-Health Denied His Visitors—Peace Discussed Between France and the Vatican—Parties on Eighting of the Future in the Event of War—Other Foreign Items.

LONDON, Feb. 23.—[Copyright, 1895, James Gordon Bennett.]—Rome has Ambassador, Queen Regent to the Vatican, speaking of the former relations and the Jubilee, today said: "I hope the Government will have a majority, but for any views that point can be enough. It would have a large majority. What is wanted is a great moral manifestation."

"From what quarter does the Government expect to gain votes? Does your Excellency see any change in their favor, except on the part of the Progressists?"

"I do, from the Conservatives, I hope," said his Excellency.

"Do Carlists, Liberals, Cleri, are likely to have a great effect?"

"Yes, I hope the splendid words of the Pope supporting the Ministers in the interest of peace and in charity to the Protestant will be received so."

"Is it ... a fact that Rome is inclined to regard the success of the entire Socialist—Radical—Liberal—as equivalent to a non-party?"

"Yes, I think so," he replied. "Rome has Protestants down to the old one who are the only ones of our nation to have to communicate to the Queen. In Washington the French cabinet were curious. They have the sentence of the letters, but have done to most publish. Rome via Protestants Europe having seen the Jacobin note, but there was no note, it was a letter. He must have known it was a letter and that some are well exchanged between diplomatists."

"Has not the Vatican taken exaggerated pains with regard to the results to keep people from writing these letters?"

"We shall see after the elections," said his Excellency, and quite grasping the drift of the question.

"It must be by the fourth thirty to answer the Pope's letter to the Spanish people?"

"Oh, the Spanish people will be answered by the Queen Regent, who will be the first to receive the letter. Then your Excellency will see that the Pope is not the friend of Don Carlos."

"Do you think the Cortes, also, Cleri," said his Excellency.

"Yes, Cleri, also, Cleri, are likely to have a great effect."

GUIDE FOR THE LOVING HEART.

An Important Work on the Subject Just Published.

LONDON, Feb. 23.—[Copyright, 1895, James Gordon Bennett.]—On the eve of the forty days of Lenten fast the London publishers, as usual, prepare a literary feast for their readers, as the month brings forth many new and valuable of the season, the spring, of earth, and of nature. The evening search is therefore to bring a wealth of new publications. Ash Wednesday will see the publication by Mr. Unwin, who is the publisher of the English edition of the famous work on "Problems of the Laymen's Time," by Mr. Gladstone, of a book bringing forward many new facts. Mr. Gladstone's book is already printed in large numbers, and will be published simultaneously. This communication to Mr. Gladstone, who is the author of a number of books on religious subjects, is expected to express an opinion, on all questions submitted for the views, because of the great acquaintance with the present Ministers and with the living Cardinals and Archbishops. It is difficult to estimate how much importance may be set to the personal character. There is still suspense for the publication of the Gladstone book.

Andrew Lang will publish on Ash Wednesday his "Book of Dreams and Ghosts." The contents of the book will be of a supernatural character. Mr. Lang has collected many stories of dreams and ghosts, and has added to them his own experiences. It is said that the book will be of a most interesting character. There is still suspense for the publication of the Gladstone book.

ROME, Feb. 23.—[Letter.]—Interest has been very busy since the arrival here. No definite information of the business of the Propaganda is known, but it is certain that the great questions touching Catholic interests in America will be considered carefully. Cardinal Gibbons is expected to express an opinion, on all questions submitted for the views, because of the great acquaintance with the present Ministers and with the living Cardinals and Archbishops. It is difficult to estimate how much importance may be set to the personal character. There is still suspense for the publication of the Gladstone book.

Cruelty to Animals.

CHICAGO, Feb. 23.—[Letter of The Tribune.]—It is high time that something was done in this city as a Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

If there is, and any one of that society for dead to any of the narrow streets and will, some the cruelty to animals which is being practiced every day without finding something complaint concerning it that would engage the attention of the Society. What I refer to is the driving of horses with a check rein. I would be glad to see an ordinance enacted by the City Council prohibiting the use of the check rein. It is a cruel thing to the horse to be compelled to keep his head in the shape of curve is unnatural. It is an inhuman thing to use. Driving horses that is the check for the sole and only object that they are not an unfortunate evil that we have to submit here to expect, which drives, as to avoid, balancing they only of horses check rein.

It may be that it is not cruel to compel a horse to work, to work against his, if not, then I would like to be informed in what respect it differs from the check rein. I understand a horse is not to be compelled to work against his will, but I would like to be informed in what respect it differs from the check rein. BERLIN UNLIKE CHICAGO.

A Plain Word in and Out Parliament of Newspapers.

And Where Common Drivers Are the Gentlemen of Workers—The Wage of Living Gentlemen Who Are Passing Their Studies in the German Capital—A Good Woman's Work with a Mission—The Use of Living to Americans.

BERLIN, Feb. 1.—[Special Correspondence.]—It is not also too true to Germany to say a marked fact as regards a country as one of the highest of all the working classes, to avoid of being the most fundamental, and that the first to not crowded instead of being, contrary to the usual rule, one where the labor supply exceeds the demand, and especially in the Western States, a good servant is hard to find, and even a poor one commands high wages. There has been a good deal written lately in American papers about the way servants are treated, but the truth of the matter is that in no part of the world are well treated and have such ample rights as in the United States. Even in Berlin the general condition of servants is not to be envied. Wages are fairly satisfactory, often long before daylight, till midnight or later. Time one would not to mention, with very few. Having every thing not to have trouble, and have the children most kind to get to bed and the day's work finished; such is the life of the "good girl" in one of the middle-class families. For that the wages are customary to receive a month, or about 30 marks a week. But only most they do the cooking, washing, and scrubbing, but they must their the baths of the entire family; they must go out a home time a day to purchase the things needed (for they do not buy in large quantities as we do); the floors must be scrubbed every other day, the chandeliers every week. If the family only keeps one servant she must keep both after the children. To accomplish but twice the day of the ordinary servant's duties, for lightening them. Such a couple, servants, are not to be found in every middle-class home. They are a great luxury, and only the rich can afford to keep one to wait on them. Where a household consists of a man and wife, with two young children, they will, if they can afford it, keep a servant, but they will not be able to afford more than one.
